Battery recall timeline

My '23 JGC was in for service today. I asked about the software update planned as step 1 for the battery recall. I was told that update wasn't expected until the end of Q3, which is the end of January.

Insane. So glad I'm paying for a hybrid jeep that you can't plug in. If jeep wanted to keep these hybrid owners they would give them credit for at least something. As it's a big inconvenience

Good luck with this. I am being told due to the active recall the lease company doesn't have to let me out of the lease. (Ally). I'm waiting on word now on how to surrender and turn the vehicle back to them.

I am scheduled for Nov 6th, along with an oil change and Gorilla Glass replacement. Both Stellantis & NHTSA say Q4 (no earlier than Oct 18th).

Service department said if they don't have the software update by Nov 6th, they will at least have the release date by then, and schedule me accordingly.

Our service department is a month out, even for Jeep Wave oil changes/tire rotations -- so scheduled the appointment last week, hoping for the best. Oil change is due soon anyway.

I was told November by one dealership and "maybe" January by another. Mopar/Jeep/FCA told my lawyer - lemon law case in progress - they have 'no timeline for a fix' and it could be '12 months before all vehicles can be repaired'

Bottom line: I don't think anyone has any idea on a timeframe

BTW, it took 18 months for my '19 Ram Cummins high-pressure fuel pump replacement recall. Potential catastrophic failure while driving. But serious supply chain issues during COVID.

That's crazy I got mine right away but my brother was the sales manager at the time so maybe that helped. This will forsure be my last Jeep and maybe my last Ram too. I feel like we have a major government bailout coming.

Woah! I don't know what to think now. Because I was texting with a salesman today who told me that all the GC 4XE's on their lot have had their updates already.

Updates for this recall have not been released. They might have all their other updates, all the released updates, but there is no way they have the update for the most recent battery recall.

Edit: They might not actually be part of the recall:

- Jeep Wrangler 4xe SUVs manufactured between July 1, 2020, and Nov. 16, 2023.
- Jeep Grand Cherokee 4xe SUVs manufactured between May 17, 2021, and Nov. 16, 2023.

Not sure how hard and fast these dates are either, because my Wrangler 4xe Rubicon was built in September of 2023 and doesn't show that it's part of the recall.
